To whom it may concern,

As a citizen of Portland OR for 21 years, I think the action to clean up the Harbor is tragically overdue. I used to live along the Willamette at near the train bridge cross in St Johns. When I walking down to the river, it was always shocking to see signs posted that the river was dangerous to touch or eat fish from.

It's time to hold industrial polluters responsible for their actions. I'm sure they will do everything to shirk responsibility and blame others for the mess, but someone has to clean it up. I look to the EPA to be the advocate for citizens, and not the enabler of corporate inaction. Please do what's right to make our river beautiful and safe again. It's resource we all share.

Let's make Portland businesses and citizens a shining example of action and will, repairing and transforming the mistakes of our past avarice and ignorance. Let's show the rest of the country -- and the world -- the power of human ingenuity to fix our past wrongs and give a gift to the future.

Sincerely,
